

As someone who teaches management for a living, this is one of the most blatant examples of corporate corruption that I have come across. Public airways represent a 'commons' and thus firms using this resource should be required to recognize it as such and allow for equal representation of all interests (particularly partisan interests during an election year). Sinclairs refusal to broadcast programming oriented towards liberal interests MUST therefore disallow them from much more slanderous use of such commons towards right-wing agendas. The permission of the anti-Kerry broadcast would represent one of the greatest errors in 'commons' protection in broadcast history. For the sake of future recognition of the FCC as a capable regulator, this can not be allowed.
